

Building the Future in Burlington: Progress Update

June 17, 2026

Chief Supply Chain Officer and EVP Sanja Krajnovic and VP of Network Strategy and Automation Patrick Brown recently visited the construction site in Burlington, N.C., where strong momentum continues to build. The visit highlighted the discipline, expertise and collaboration driving this work forward.

Throughout the tour, both leaders recognized the pace of construction and the quality of execution. Engagement with project teams provided clear visibility into the coordination, ownership and focus supporting key milestones.

Sanja noted the positive energy across the site and the strength of the team assembled by Ahold Delhaize USA and Tippmann Construction. The partnership, combined with pride and professionalism, supports steady progress and strong execution. Patrick reinforced this progress, recognizing alignment across teams as the site takes shape as a critical part of a future-ready supply chain.

Backed by a committed team, strong partnerships and engaged leadership, the Burlington Distribution Center is an example of disciplined execution, collaboration and modern supply chain development. The progress reflects the expertise and commitment of associates and partners working across the site each day.

This progress sets the foundation for a stronger, more modern network as we continue building the future together.
